CONSUMER GROUPS ASK GOVERNOR LARRY HOGAN OF MARYLAND TO BOYCOTT AUTOMAKERS WHO SUPPORT TRUMP LAWSUIT TO REVOKE STATES' RIGHTS TO MORE FUEL EFFICIENT VEHICLES

Washington D.C. — Three national consumer groups are urging Governor Larry Hogan of Maryland to boycott the automakers¹ who are supporting President Trump's attack on states' rights and the Clean Air Act. These nine automakers are supporting the Trump lawsuit which revokes Section 177 of the Clean Air Act. This action will strip away states' rights to adopt a stronger vehicle emissions standard which will save STATE residents at the pump. Section 177 of the Clean Air Act has enjoyed bi-partisan support for more than 40 years.

Today's letter to Governor Hogan from the Consumer Federation of America, Consumer Action, and Consumers for Auto Reliability and Safety (CARS) says that by stopping the state's purchase of vehicles from these nine manufactures, Maryland will be sending a strong message that spending state taxpayer dollars on companies that oppose the state's right to more environmentally friendly and fuel efficient vehicles is simply wrong.

The groups are calling on Governor Hogan to demonstrate unwavering resolve for cleaner cars that save money at the pump with Maryland taxpayer's hard earned dollars. As climate change becomes one of the most important issues of the day, this is no time to roll back progress on reducing air pollution.

Maryland is a member of the U.S. Climate Alliance² along with 22 other states, and is suing the Trump Administration to stop this unwarranted rollback of popular fuel economy standards. “Governor Hogan is in the perfect position to pressure automakers to drop their support of the lawsuit, and what better way to do that than reward those companies who agree that vehicles can and should be made more efficient,” said Jack Gillis, Executive Director of Consumer Federation of America (CFA).

The Trump Administration is waging an all-out attack on clean car and fuel economy standards. In addition to revoking the Clean Car standards, it is also rolling back the fuel economy standards. That rollback will cost Maryland $5.7 billion in lost fuel savings—money that should be put back into taxpayer pockets and the local economy.

A CFA survey found that over two-thirds of consumers across the country believe in a state’s right to adopt a higher emission standard that results in increased fuel economy. That is even more reason for Maryland to continue its commitment to fight for the Clean Cars standard.

“It’s mind-boggling that any governor, regardless of political stripe, would support attacks on the Clean Air Act,” said Ken McEldowney, Executive Director of Consumer Action. “Apparently they are not invested in protecting the health and wellbeing of their families, youngsters and descendants, let alone the health of our entire planet. Taking an oppositional position to the Clean Air Act is irresponsibly placing short-term profits in front of common sense and empathy for future generations.”

Consumer Federation of America, Consumer Action, and Consumers for Auto Reliability and Safety believe that by boycotting these nine automakers in state fleet purchases, Governor Hogan will send them a signal that their support of the Trump Administration’s attack on the environment and against consumers has economic consequences and that Maryland is committed to retaining the right to protect its citizens’ pocketbooks and health.
